PRACTICE OVERVIEW

Charles is an advocate for clients who often face complex legal problems in multiple forums. Solving these problems often requires him to shift comfortably between litigating in federal or state court, negotiating with regulators, and crafting public policy solutions (sometimes in the same case).

Charles draws on his diverse experiences in all three branches of the federal government—coupled with more than a decade in private practice—to be a flexible advocate in each of these forums.

Charles is originally from Charlotte. He began his legal career as a law clerk to the Honorable John D. Butzner on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit in Richmond, Virginia. He then spent almost four years as an appellate litigator in the U.S. Department of Justice in Washington, D.C., before spending two years as a policy adviser on the staff of now-Majority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-KY).

When Charles returned to Raleigh in 2003, he combined his federal experiences to develop a flexible practice that has included successfully defending North Carolina's ethanol-blending law in federal court, successfully challenging a state law restricting the development of adult care homes, advocating for media clients on Capitol Hill, representing national Presidential campaigns, advising media organizations on political broadcasting issues, and even helping a local flea market repair its relationship with a city government.

Charles has recently expanded his practice into digital media and data privacy. He has counseled a number of clients—both large and small—on how to respond to a data breach and how to institute policies to avoid future breaches. He also advises clients on the risks of digital and social media, including copyright law and the growing federal regulations regarding online marketing and privacy. He is a frequent speaker on digital media and data privacy topics and a contributor to the Firm's Digital Media and Data Privacy blog.

As election and ethics laws continue to expand, Charles has helped companies navigate the new constitutional landscape—including the use of independent expenditures, "SuperPACs." He has also guided clients through campaign finance investigations.

DIGITAL MEDIA AND DATA PRIVACY

Charles has counseled companies responding to data breaches, including notifications to consumers, state regulators, insurers and vendors in various states. He also helps companies identify data privacy issues on the "front-end" and implement policies to reduce the risk of a future data breach. Charles also helps digital media and e-commerce companies draft privacy policies for online services and mobile applications and to avoid risks.

Charles draws on his media law experience to help clients identify and address digital and social media content, including copyright, trademark, right of publicity, and online marketing issues. He has worked with "start-up" online services, large media companies and even a national presidential campaign.

Charles regularly advocates before Congress and the FCC on broadcast law issues for several state and federal trade associations.

BUSINESS LITIGATION

Charles has litigated complex business cases in federal and state court, including matters involving constitutional claims, class actions, trade secrets and other business torts, and intellectual property matters. He appears regularly in the North Carolina Business Court, and he argued more than 15 cases in the federal courts of appeals as an attorney at the United States Department of Justice. Most recently, Charles successfully defended a state gasoline law against federal constitutional challenges.

Charles also defends clients against enforcement actions by regulatory boards and state agencies regarding professional licensure issues, unfair and deceptive practices, election and ethics law violations, as well as tax, real estate and mortgage lending matters. He often works with regulators to negotiate settlements and obtain proactive regulatory guidance.

ELECTION AND ETHICS LAW

Charles is a leader in the firm's political and election law practice . He counsels clients on state and federal campaign finance laws, including the use of "SuperPACs" and other activities by corporations and tax-exempt organizations. He also counsels media companies on political advertising rules and regulations during each election season.

Charles has handled several confidential investigations into election and ethics law matters, and he has worked with regulators to obtain proactive regulatory guidance on various election law topics. He has been a speaker and presenter on various election law topics.
