North Carolina Legislators finished up what is expected to be the last in a series of 2017 "special sessions" this week. The General Assembly overrode Governor Cooper's veto of S656, a bill that will cancel North Carolina's judicial primaries next year among other election law changes. Both chambers adjourned Tuesday and will not return until January 2018. For more information, contact Brooks Pierce's Government Affairs Team, linked below.
