

Will Quick Talks to WRAL About Privacy Issues Related to Doorbell Cameras

March 5, 2019

Topics: Data Security

Brooks Pierce attorney Will Quick recently spoke to Raleigh television station WRAL about the intersection of privacy law and home surveillance technology, particularly doorbell cameras, used by private citizens.

While most people use these types of cameras legitimately to help protect their property, with any new technology there is a risk of misuse, whether intentional or not. Quick explained the use of home surveillance cameras is generally covered by well-established privacy law that holds that people have a reasonable expectation of privacy in certain places.

The full article is available here.

BLOG ARCHIVE

TOPICS

- About This Blog
- Access to Court Dockets
- Access to Courtrooms
- Access to Search Warrants
- Anti-SLAPP Statutes
- Contact
- Cyberattack
- Data Breach
- Data Security
- Defamation
- Digital Media and Data Privacy
- Law
- Disclaimer
- Drone Law
- Fair Report Privilege
- FCC Matters
- First Amendment
- First Amendment Retaliation
- FOIA
- HIPAA
- Indecency
- Internet
- Intrusion
- Miscellaneous
- Mobile Privacy
- Newsroom Search Warrants
- Newsroom Subpoenas
- Political Advertising
- Prior Restraints
- Privacy
- Privacy Policies
- Public Records
- Reporters Privilege
- Services
- Shield Laws
- Wiretapping

LINKS

International Association of Privacy Professionals
National Association of Broadcasters
North Carolina Cable
Telecommunications Association
North Carolina Press Association
North Carolina Association of Broadcasters
Radio-Television News Directors Association of the Carolinas
Media Law Resource Center
The Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press
Society of Professional Journalists
The Journalist's Toolbox - American Press Institute
Law Blog - WSJ.com
Legal Blog Watch
North Carolina Business Litigation Report